WINE OF ARGENTINA

PARA DOS, MENDOZA

The Para Dos Malbec has punched well above the price point since its launch in the UK, in spite of the difficult harvest in 2016 where up to 50% of the fruit was lost due to frost and the subsequent price hikes, this is still a remarkably good Malbec for the money.

With vineyards at an average altitude of 3.937 feet, this is one of the largest cool climate vineyards in Mendoza which is important as this suits the Sauvignon Blanc grape and helps retain vitality, freshness and acidity whilst the Torrontes in the blend gives the wine the aromatics and fruit driven flavours, but in a subtle understated way, an excellent wine for matching with Indian and Thai cuisine.

The 2016 vintage was one of the most difficult in the history of Chablis, severe frost in May followed by hail meant that some producers lost nearly 50% of their harvest, the result has been a Chablis shortage and major price rises, happily Domaine Damppt has seen only moderate price increases and the wines remain excellent quality. Domaine Damppt uses concentrated grapes to produce a wonderful aromatic, stone fruit, mineral Chablis with ageing potential.

The brand represents excellent price-quality ratio and consumer friendly fruity characterful wines. Produced in Campo de Borja where Garnacha thrives, all the wine making is overseen by Master of Wine Fernando Mora. Campo de Borja wine making tradition dates back to the 12th century and winemaking in the region is heavily dependent on a high portion of old vines. Diverse "terrors" and generally low-yielding vines producing wines of structural and aromatic complexity. The area benefits from a continental climate with cool, dry "Cierzo" winds in the winter and Mediterranean influences in the summer. These extreme climates and contrasts between daytime and nighttime temperatures help to produce wines with good acidity, intense colour and pleasing tannins.
